

*PARTICIPANT
RESOURCE GUIDE:
WHAT THIS PROGRAM
IS (AND IS NOT)*

Understanding Your Access to Housing Readiness
Education

What This Is

This educational resource is provided through a partnership between Interior Essentials and your college, university, or community program. It offers optional, education-only guidance to help students and participants make informed decisions about living spaces before and after move-in.

What This Is Not

- This is not a course requirement or academic program
- This is not housing placement or institutional policy
- This is not legal, financial, or maintenance advice
- Participation is completely optional

How to Use This Resource

- Self-paced and on-demand
- Designed to support independent living skills
- Separate from housing offices, academics, and student services
- Intended to reduce stress during housing transitions

Privacy & Participation

- No personal data is shared with your institution
- Your activity is not monitored or reported
- Use the resource as much or as little as you choose

Why This Resource Exists

Many housing challenges affect academic focus, mental well-being, and financial stability. This resource exists to support life transitions that quietly influence student success without adding pressure, policies, or obligations.